To Protect Produce Industry

Tighter Tariffs Urged

Canada's fruit and vegetable industry needs better import tariff protection if home-grown products are to be enjoyed, Philip R. Robinson of Ottawa, Canadian Food Processors' Association manager, said Monday.

He told 100 convention delegates at the Empress Hotel yesterday the tariff would protect Canada's 50,000 commercial growers from dumping of American produce.

The import of vegetables and fruit similar to that grown here proves the processing industry could be handling more, Mr. Robinson said.

The tariff rate would also protect growers' investments and provide more jobs for Canadians, more goods to be transported and an outlet for processing by-products, he said.

The 12th annual convention of the group continues until Wednesday.
